Abstract

In this study, an attempt was made to evaluate the antibacterial activity of seed of Mucuna pruriens used as ethnomedicine in various region of India. The antimicrobial activity of Mucuna pruriens extracts were tested on E.coli by disc diffusion method. The ethanol extract showed good antimicrobial activity. The minimal inhibitory concentration of M.pruriens extracts was determined by tube dilution technique against E.coli. These results indicate that M.pruriens showed potent antimicrobial activity.

Keywords: antibacterial, diffusion, Mucuna pruriens

Abstract

Highly competitive marketing environment and the growth of online marketing have made the retail stores to realize the importance of Customer Relationship Management. The lack of understanding on Customer Relationship Management is always a concern among the retail stores, which are mostly unorganised. Customer Relationship Management (CRM) has the potential for achieving success and growth for organizations. CRM enables retail sector to know their customers better and to build sustainable relationships with them. Nowadays, as the economic environment continuously fluctuates, many retail sectors are looking for strategies to be followed to satisfy their wide range of customers and even wider range of needs. Thus, a combination of customer delight and loyalty is essential. Customer Relationship Management tools help the organization to identify and implement the strategies to retain customers. In this paper an attempt has been made to study the impact of CRM on customer satisfaction and customer loyalty in retail sector.

Abstract

The emergence of unexpected changes in the field of science leads to revolutionary changes in the society. One of the major revolutions is Noetic science that has broken new grounds in the understanding of how the universe works. Noetic science focuses more in the inner universe rather than the outer universe. The primary concern is with consciousness, unlike conventional science which is actively concerned with the role that consciousness plays in the dance of life. Noetic Science has made firm inroads into exotic observations of Transhumanism. When Dan Brown's The Lost Symbol is explored with insights of transcending mortality and Transhumanism, it bestows a very new and different perspective to the novel. Transhumanism is termed as another form of immortality or a new dimensional alchemy and, achieved with the scientific mode of nano technology and artificial intelligence. Even during the 19th century, there was a theory called Panpsychism, the default theory in the field of mind philosophy and one of the oldest philosophical theories has been ascribed to many ancient well-known philosophers. The paper concludes that due to the evolution of Transhumanism, the world of human beings would turn into e-world where the souls would writhe under the control of inhuman artificial intelligence. Furthermore, the glorious divinity predicted in the holy books and scriptures for souls would be gone into null and void.

Abstract

The COVID-19 pandemic has disrupted student's education. In response, many institutions implemented some forms of remote learning or the other. The education system during the early phase of COVID-19 focused on implementing remote learning modalities as an emergency response. Digital resources were intended to reach all students but were not always successful. The pandemic period has evolved, so too have education responses. More and more information sharing technologies are searched by people. This is the worst situation to student, but digital resources help to fulfill their needs. Online mode of learning is easily accessible and can even reach to rural and remote areas.

Abstract

In today's demanding world, everybody needs instant banking solution for a better lifestyle. Timely adoption of E-banking is significant for all banks to have secure future business. Banks are facing extremely intensive competition from non-banking sector, thus they have adopted a more aggressive approach to fight against competitors for providing financial services to customers. The main target of banks has shifted from customer acquisition to customer satisfaction. Most of the banks offer services through electronic medium called E-Banking. As bank wants to move very nearer to the customer, increase its basic operational strategies, move towards international trade, need of quick transfer of money, which motivated the researchers to introduce new structure and era i.e. Electronic Banking. The research objective is to investigate various factors influence customer perception and satisfaction level towards SBI E-Banking services. Through all banking sector are providing E-Banking, the main question is whether the customer are aware of all E-Banking services offered by State Bank of India. The purpose of the study is to create awareness among customers and find out what they preferred most in banking services of State Bank of India.

Abstract

The theory of Nano topology was introduced by Lellis Thivagar. He defined a Nano topological space with respect to a subset X of a universe U which is defined based on lower and upper approximations of X. In this paper, a new form of nano Closed sets called Nano $\wedge K_{R_2}$ closed set is introduced and obtained various results. The purpose of this paper is to investigate and compare the properties of nano $\wedge K_{R_2}$ closed sets and nano $\wedge K_{R_2}$ open set with various other nano closed and nano open sets.

Abstract

In this paper we have discussed with commutativity of cyclic weak commutative near rings. The properties of near rings with cyclic weak commutativity are discussed using the concepts of medial, identity, cancellation laws and so on. Some important properties and theorem have been studied under certain conditions. It is proved that every cyclic weak commutative near ring with commutativity is medial. We have also characterized that every cyclic weak commutative near ring with commutativity is weak commutative, pseudo weak commutative and quasi weak commutative.

Keywords: Boolean, Commutative, Identity, Pseudo commutative, Weak commutative, Quasi weak commutative.

Abstract

In this article, we take into account and review the works of poet Vairamuthu to analyse the intellectual capabilities of mankind and animals. Vairamuthu, in his works, bring into light various instances where animals exhibit their capabilities with par to humans intellectual ability such as the ability of specific animals to detect earthquake using their natural instinct whereas humans use our intellect and come up with new inventions to find the same. Sometimes animals show more gratitude and behave unbiased. The mammalian species is known for nurturing their offspring. Yet, humans who belong to mammal species and orphan their own children. Mankind causes the major violations against nature and its arrangements. Human beings occupy the highest rank for their abilities. Yet, animals exhibit characteristics that humans should learn from them. When a human is rejoicing his selfish silence, animals are dying in the other end. Vairamuthu expects us to stop this and acquires virtues. The idea of bringing up the comparison is to maintain a communal harmony in our society. Human beings have got the responsibility to take care of himself and other lives in this planet. Vairamuthu expects humans to acquire virtues from other beings and grow as tactful individuals to develop our society. We can infer from his works that he for a socially responsible person. He propounds the social problems and the ways to resolve them in such a way that imparts knowledge among the present generation in his works. He also emphasizes this fact in most of his works.

Abstract

The Earthworm Eisenia fetida was cultured using garden leaf litter (Control), Aquatic weed water hyacinth (Eichornia sp., (E1) and Waterhyacinth+Probiotic enriched E.fetida (E2) for 60 days. Tissue protein was calculated by Lowry et al., (1951) method. The results of the study confirmed that worms grown on Eichornia sp., with probiotic enriched earthworm showed 88.60% increased length, 128.00% increased weight and 84.90% higher tissue protein than the control group of earth worm. Earthworm is viewed as a potential ingredient and a good source of protein in animal feed formulation. Vermiculture of probiotic enriched earthworm using aquatic weeds is a cheap strategy to get good source of protein, bio-fertilizer and a most promising way to clean the aquatic habitat.

Abstract

The Danish girl, written by David Ebershoff, is based on the true story of the transgender pioneer Lilli Elbe, who was born as Einar Wegener in the early 20th century. Einar had a happy married life with his wife Gerda Wegener until Gerda convinced her husband Einar to pose in women's clothing for a portrait, so Gerda would be able to finish her work. This small moment becomes a moment incident when Einar realizes that he could not hide his true gender and identity as a woman any longer. The novel focuses on how Lili struggles throughout her groundbreaking transgender journey. Some of Lili's journey includes intimacy that challenges social standards, the division of males and females within society and Lili's sex reassignment surgery to become fully female. The purpose of this study is to analyze how the life of Lili Einar Wegener is portrayed due to the transformation of Einar, a male to a female. Through the course of the study both confusion as well as social and family pressures were found, which can then be used to illuminate the definition of transgender in a "socially - constructed" society. The main purpose of this paper is to purport the transfiguration of Einar Wegener and the behaviours of him that are not normal. The paper also depicts the whole life of the couple that they really suffered through the gender identification and all the other hazards that took place as a result of it.
